Indigenous Peoples' Rights: blended learning and field-based experience

5th Annual Course & Field Visit

E-Learning Course Indigenous Peoples' Rights:
27 May - 7 July 2015
Instructor: Professor Mihir Kanade

Field Visit: 3 - 9 August 2015, Amubri, Talamanca, Costa Rica
Instructors: Ms. Adilia Caravaca & Professor Mihir Kanade

Description: This blended learning program provides participants with the opportunity to study indigenous peoples' rights through the lived experience of an indigenous community close to the Caribbean coast of Costa Rica. The e-learning course will provide participants with knowledge and awareness about indigenous peoples' rights and contemporary issues related to their protection particularly in the context of globalization. The field visit combines theoretical and normative areas of indigenous peoples' rights with field study, and includes the experience of being hosted for five days by a group of indigenous women from the community. The program is ideal for human rights advocates working with NGOs and civil society organizations, practitioners, academics, and students studying in areas of indigenous peoples' rights, human rights, environment, gender and development.

Language: English

Costs: US$2,375 ($1,800 if paid by 1 February 2015)
It is also possible to participate only in the e-learning or the field components.

Registration is now open. Only 25 seats are available.
